BE IN THE KNOW

Keeping natural attractions pristine serves a bigger purpose – protecting the planet. Hence, we have employed science-based approach to track changes, implement efficient operations and deploy awareness programmes to provide an adaptive frameworks.

In 2004, Banyan Tree Maldives Lab officially opened its doors, serving the twin-island: Banyan Tree Vabbinfaru and Dhewa Ihurur (formerly known as Angsana Ihuru). It became the very first resort-based facility in the Maldives, designed for fieldwork conducted by visiting scientists, as well as to promote marine conservation and sustainable livelihoods in local communities.
